Embaby Elio Mike Mattesi is a visionary entrepreneur and advocate for the visually impaired. Through his work, he has created innovative solutions to improve the lives of people with vision loss.

Mattesi was born in Cairo, Egypt, in 1959. He lost his sight at the age of 10 due to a rare genetic condition called retinitis pigmentosa. Despite this challenge, Mattesi went on to earn a degree in computer science from the University of California, Berkeley. He then worked as a software engineer for several years before founding his own company, Embaby, in 1995.

Embaby is a leading provider of assistive technology for the visually impaired. The company's products include screen readers, talking watches, and GPS devices. Mattesi's goal is to make it easier for people with vision loss to live independently and achieve their full potential.

In addition to his work at Embaby, Mattesi is also an active advocate for the visually impaired. He is a member of the board of directors of the American Foundation for the Blind and the Lighthouse International. He is also a frequent speaker at conferences and events on vision loss.

Mattesi's work has had a profound impact on the lives of people with vision loss. His products and advocacy have helped to break down barriers and create a more inclusive world for people with disabilities.

Early Life and Education

Embaby Elio Mike Mattesi was born in Cairo, Egypt, in 1959. He is the youngest of three children. His parents were both teachers, and they instilled in him a love of learning from an early age.

When Mattesi was 10 years old, he was diagnosed with retinitis pigmentosa, a rare genetic condition that causes progressive vision loss.

Mattesi's vision gradually deteriorated over the next few years, and by the time he was in high school, he was legally blind.

Despite his vision loss, Mattesi refused to let it define him. He continued to excel in school, and he graduated from high school with honors. He then went on to earn a degree in computer science from the University of California, Berkeley.

Career

After graduating from college, Mattesi worked as a software engineer for several years. However, he soon realized that he wanted to do more to help people with vision loss.

In 1995, Mattesi founded Embaby, a company that provides assistive technology for the visually impaired. Embaby's products include screen readers, talking watches, and GPS devices.

Mattesi's goal is to make it easier for people with vision loss to live independently and achieve their full potential. He believes that technology can play a key role in breaking down barriers and creating a more inclusive world for people with disabilities.

Advocacy

In addition to his work at Embaby, Mattesi is also an active advocate for the visually impaired. He is a member of the board of directors of the American Foundation for the Blind and the Lighthouse International. He is also a frequent speaker at conferences and events on vision loss.

Mattesi is passionate about raising awareness of vision loss and its impact on people's lives. He believes that everyone has the potential to achieve great things, regardless of their vision.

Awards and Recognition

Mattesi has received numerous awards and recognition for his work. In 2005, he was named one of the "50 Most Influential People in the Disability Community" by the National Council on Disability.

In 2010, he was awarded the "Lifetime Achievement Award" by the American Association for the Blind.

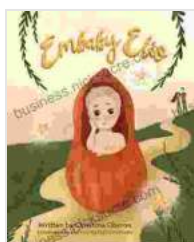

In 2015, he was inducted into the National Inventors Hall of Fame.

Personal Life

Mattesi is married and has two children. He enjoys spending time with his family, traveling, and reading.

Embaby Elio Mike Mattesi is a visionary entrepreneur and advocate for the visually impaired. Through his work, he has created innovative solutions to improve the lives of people with vision loss.

Mattesi's passion, dedication, and tireless advocacy have made a real difference in the world. He is an inspiration to us all.
